About the Composer

English composer Sir Edward Elgar (1857-1934) was born in Lower Broadheath, the fourth of seven children. His father was a noted musician, proficient on violin, who worked as a music retailer and piano tuner. The Elgar children were all exposed to music early on, and Edward studied violin and developed an early interest in composing music. As a young man he was active in Worcester musical circles and gained a wealth of performance, composition and conducting experience. He was particularly inspired performing under the baton of Antonin Dvorak, and also at hearing Camille Saint-Saëns perform on organ in Paris. Elgar is most famous for his orchestral suite, "Enigma Variations" as well as his six "Pomp and Circumstance" marches, the first of which is frequently performed as a processional at commencement ceremonies. He was one of the first composers to embrace recording technology, and conducted recordings of many of his works. He died in 1934 in Worcester, at the age of seventy-six.

About the Music

Elgar's Salut d'Amour, originally entitled "Liebesgruss" (Love's Greeting), was composed in 1888 and as one of his earliest works, bears the notation Opus 12. It was composed as an engagement present to his fiancée, Caroline Alice Roberts, and the earliest versions show a dedication "à Carice," a conjoined version of her first and middle names. Composed for solo violin with piano accompaniment, this had become one of Elgar's most enduring melodies, and has been played by countless solo instruments.

This arrangement offers a wide variety of options for choice of solo instrument, with concert band accompaniment, and multiple solo parts are included.
